ORIGEN OF ALEXANDRIA'S ON FIRST PRINCIPLES

a summer seminar for PhD students
July 10-15, 2022 | University of Toronto

LEWIS AYRES

*Professor of Catholic & Historical Theology,
Durham University*

FR. JOHN BEHR

Regius Chair in Humanity, University of Aberdeen

This seminar will be a close reading of Origen's On First Principles, supplemented by various other texts from his corpus. One of the first systematic presentations of the Christian faith, On First Principles, written c. 220, is also a complex text to engage. While we possess some Greek fragments, the whole survives only in a much later Latin translation. At the same time, it is essential to see how the positions that Origen puts forth in this work relate to those we find developed in his biblical exegesis. Accordingly, we will examine texts from the On First Principles in parallel with selections from his Commentary on John, Against Celsus, and his various Old Testament commentaries.

Open to PhD students in theology, philosophy, classics, and other relevant fields of study.

Meals, lodging, and a $350 travel stipend provided.

See online application for more details.

The application deadline is February 15, 2022.
